Acta Orthopaedica (previously Acta Orthopaedica Scandinavica) is owned by the Nordic Orthopaedic Federation and is thereby a non-profit journal. Since 2005 Acta is a so called platinum Open Access journal, which means that it is not only free to the general reader but articles (including color print) are published with no costs to authors. The articles are immediately, after authors have approved proofs, presented in PubMed (abstract) with a link to PubMedCentral (full article). Furthermore, the entire Acta production, since the very start in 1930 is free at Taylor & Francis.
